No Limits

Don't let people tell you you're not capable of great things!

Paul McCartney - one of the most famous musical composers and performers of all time. Early life was not easy, but he never put any of the pre-set limitations put him off:

- He was 'working class' and less likely and had less opportunity to succeed than those who were more well-off.
- His mother died when he was 13 - and she was the wage-earner. This left his father distraught and the family with little money.
- Despite all this and being told he would amount to much as an adult, he knew that education was the key and worked hard at school. He did well.
- His passion was music, but he couldn't read music. That didn't stop him learning how to read music, though.
- He joined a band and was told they'd never get anywhere if they played their own songs rather than covers - believing in his and the band's composing talents, he continued to play his own music
- He was left handed and couldn't play a 'normal' right-handed guitar. This didn't stop hi playing a 'back-to-front' guitar
- They were repeatedly told that, because they were from Liverpool, they would never be successful
- The Beatles were turned-down time and time again by record labels, until one took a chance on them.

- They persevered, never put limits on what they knew they could achieve
- Soon enjoyed worldwide and everlasting fame including many films and albums with 'The Beatles', 'Wings' and other solo and group hits.

Always just 'be who you are' - you don't need to change and never let anyone tell you you're not capable of the very best

*.....the type of people that I came from, I never saw better!
... I mean, the Presidents, the Prime Minister, I never met anyone half as nice as some of the people I know from Liverpool who are nothing, who do nothing. They're not important or famous. But they are smart, like my dad was smart. I mean, people who can just cut through problems like a hot knife through butter. The kind of people you need in life. Salt of the earth.....*
